An entrepreneur is someone who should be highly respected and commended for their accomplishments. Unfortunately there are times when you reach the top; you will find there are people who want to bring you down. I feel this is what is happening in this case. Why should Microsoft be punished for their exceptional success? In my opinion the accusations of monopoly are false due to the fact that competitors are still in business selling their software. It just so happens Microsoft sells more. I feel it is untrue that users are not able to use whatever software they choose. A computer only does what a user tells it to do. If you tell the computer to uninstall a piece of software and install another, it will do just that. Computer users have a choice of what software they want to use. Microsoft shouldn't be punished for being #1.
